R&D Tax Credits do increase innovative activity. With no policy currently in place, will the United States become even less competitive by failing to create an environment that properly induces firms to innovate? Policy makers must act by making increasing and making permanent the R&D tax credit, or we will all pay the price.